Area Information:

Venice is the southern most point on the Mississippi River that can be reached by land. It is the jumping off point for the thousands of oil and gas rigs in the gulf. Venice suffered a direct hit from Hurricane Katrina and has been slow to recover. Amenities are sparse and location is remote. Come prepared with everything you may need.

There is a restaurant at Venice Marina and one at Cypress Cove. There is one convenience store and a BBQ takeout in town. The closest market is in Port Sulfur. It is advisable to stock up before you leave New Orleans. The last Supermarket is a Winn Dixie in Belle Chase on Hwy. 23 just south of New Orleans. The last decent gas station for boats on trailers is in front of the Winn Dixie in Belle Chase. There is no gas available south of Venice. Port Eads and Pilottown were destroyed by Hurricane Katrina. At present (3/1/12) fuel at the marinas is averaging $4.20 per gallon. Ballyhoo may or may not be available at Venice Marina or Cypress Cove. Be prepared to bring your own ballyhoo if you are planning to do some trolling. There is a small bait shop at Venice Marina. Venice has some of the best fishing in the world. Just look at our Club Records and you'll see some outstanding catches from the few trips we have made there. You should expect to catch tuna and wahoo offshore, amberjack, kings, snapper, grouper and cobia on the near shore or delta rigs and huge redfish around the mouth of the river.

Navigation: buy a good chart and stick to the main routes. South pass and Southwest pass will be your primary routes and are well marked. Be aware South pass has submerged jetties on the east side and underwater weirs in the cuts off of the river. Tiger Pass is a short cut to the delta but the but not advisable in the fog or dark. Use caution navigating in areas you are not familiar with. Out of the main river channels, currents silt up "mud lumps" and some areas are still scattered debris from the storm. Sea Tow & Boat US coverage by licensed local providers only. Pay up front and submit bill for payment.

Plenty of fish and excitement. Lots of history, www.barpilot.com, www.hurricane-katrina.org
For information on the area just google Port Eads, Pilottown, South West Pass, South Pass.
